

Socorro Aggressor

Socorro, San Benedicto and Roca Partida are three volcanic islands that make up the Revillagigedo Islands. These islands are most commonly known as Socorro. Located 250 nautical miles south of Cabo San Lucas, Mexico at the tip of the Baja Peninsula, it takes 24 hours to travel to this magnificent area. Our liveboard boat trips to Socorro, San Benedicto, and Roca Partida are beautifully unique. Socorro is best known for the wonderful encounters with giant pacific manta rays, where the mantas come to the divers and are happy to stay throughout entire dives. This isn't all you will see during a liveboard boat trip to Socorro, there are up to ten species of sharks including whale sharks, silbies, silver tips, white tips and sometimes tiger sharks. Dolphin encounters are always thrilling and from January through March these islands are home to a migratory population of humpback whales that come to breed and have calves. Whale sharks are seen mainly in November/December and April/May. Divers may also observe many different behaviors of manta cleaning stations, Bottlenose dolphin, wahoo, tuna, marlin and smaller creatures like eels, nudibranchs and octopi.

Our Socorro liveboard boat trips are wild and unpredictable diving at its best! The Socorro Aggressor offers comfortable staterooms with two single beds (side by side) in Deluxe Staterooms or queen bed in Master Staterooms, a private head and shower, individual climate control, monitor with media player USB/110V outlet, port-hole, bathrobes, fresh towels and hairdryer. You can expect the same great service and accommodations as on all Aggressor cruises!
